FEARFUL TRAGEDY
SMASHED TO DEATH IN DAUGHTER'S PRESENCE

Inquest yesterday

A frightful railway accident occurred on Thursday afternoon at Woodford Halse Station on the Great Central. Mr. Thomas R. PRATT, Little Preston, Preston Capes, being cut down by an express and instantly killed. The body was terribly mutilated, and the fatality was made additionally distressing by the fact that it was witnessed by Mr. PRATT's daughter, who was just starting on a holiday.

The sad affair occurred about two o'clock. Mr. PRATT drove his daughter to the station with some luggage in a pony cart. He drove up to the goods approach, took a parcel, and started to cross the line with it for the down platform. At the moment the up express from Newcastle to Bournemouth rushed through the station, and Mr. PRATT was hurled a considerable distance. It appears that the buffer struck his head, which was terribly smashed. It is said that the impact was so loud that it was like the sound of a fog signal, and was heard by people a good way off. The injuries were frightful. The brain was scattered in all directions. The right arm and the right leg were cut off, and the left leg was terribly crushed.

The distress of Miss PRATT, who was an eyewitness, was most pitiful; and though she received all possible comfort from the railway officials, it was long before she could be pacified. Dr. A. Glen HAYS was summoned, but, of course, he could do nothing. The portions of the body were collected, and, under the direction of P.C. GUPWELL, were removed to the White Hart Hotel.

The Inquest

Mr G. M. PERCIVAL, District Coroner, held the inquest on Friday afternoon. The Foreman of the Jury was Mr W. H. SMITH, and the Railway Company was represented by Mr G. H. ASKEW (Loco Superintendent), Mr T. J. ALMEY (Traffic Inspector) and Mr W. HOPLEY (Permanent-way Inspector).

Miss Claudina PRATT, aged about 23, was called. She said that her father, Mr Thomas Ralph PRATT, was a retired wine merchant and farmer, formerly of Daventry and was 63 years of age. He drove her to Woodford on Thursday, as she was going away by train to London. He drove up the goods station approach to deliver two sacks of potatoes. They alighted near the goods office. There was a luggage train standing in the way, and witness told her father she could not go across. He then took her luggage across and witness intended to follow after the line was clear. The approach and steps from the main road to the station was the proper way to go. The witness continued:

"I saw him pass the front of the luggage train and then I saw the express train coming. I called out to him, but he could not hear me. He afterwards turned as if he saw the train coming, and he ran, and I thought he got safely to the other side. I did not see him knocked down. I should have crossed the line in the same way to save time, if the luggage train had not been in the way." Harry GOODE, Hinton, mineral clerk on the Great Central Railway at Woodford Station, said that Miss PRATT asked him, about 2.5 p.m., if a goods porter were near. Witness was in the gateway coming across to his office. The deceased also asked him if a goods porter could take two bags of potatoes out of the trap. He found the porter in the weigh office, and asked him to see about the matter. Witness was speaking to him when he heard a report and thought something had happened. Witness did not see Mr PRATT knocked down. When witness went to look for the porter he left Mr PRATT standing near the trap, and did not know that he intended to cross the line or witness would have stopped him. Witness did not notice any luggage in Mr PRATT's hands. The gate is private and for the use of the company's servants only, and the public have no right to use that way to the station. There is a notice at the entrance to the goods yard to that effect.

William WELCH, Hinton, foreman platelayer at Woodford, said that he was at the south end of Woodford Station platform, and saw a man cross the up loop line from the goods yard. There was an engine attached to a goods train, which was stationary as far as witness could see. The man, who was Mr PRATT, had a bag of luggage in his left hand, and he crossed the up main line and stood close to the platform. Witness saw the up express come and hit him. Witness did not see him make any movement. It appeared as though Mr PRATT did not see any danger, but it was doubtful if he had time to get on the platform had he tried. Mr PRATT had the luggage in his hand when knocked down. It appeared to witness to be a pure accident.

Witness assisted to pick the deceased up and to remove the body. He was quite dead. From the time witness saw him to the train hitting him would be about three seconds.

P.C. William GUPWELL, stationed at Woodford, said that he was called to the station, and found the deceased lying close to the platform face downwards. He appeared to have been run over by a train. After Dr HAYS had seen the body, witness had it removed to the White Hart Hotel. The gold watch on the body was still going, the glass only being cracked and very slight damage done to the works.

Dr A. Glen HAYS said that he was advised that a man had been knocked down at the station about a quarter past two, and he immediately attended. He found the body of Mr PRATT, a gentleman whom he knew well. He was quite dead. The skull was badly fractured, and the right arm and both legs were severed. Witness superintended the removal to the White Hart Hotel. He should say that death was instantaneous.

The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death" and expressed a desire that their sympathy should be conveyed to the relatives of the deceased.

Mr PRATT's wife died about twelve months ago, and a married daughter quite recently.

The driver of the engine was Mr O'BRIEN, a Woodford man.

PYM, Adeline Mary

1862-1906>

The daughter of Edward Gambier, then Rector of Washington, Durham and Lucy Catherine PYM (née BAXTER), Adeline was born in Washington, Durham in 1862. After her father's death in 1864, she moved with her mother to her maternal grandfather's home in Westminster, Middx and left there to lease apartments in Hammersmith. She became a member of the Navy Mission Society, who worked to improve the living conditions of navvies on the railways and moved to Woodford Halse before coming to Preston Capes in 1897 where she rented a cottage. She moved to East Molesey, Surrey but her continued support of her cause led her to petition for bankruptcy on 2 Jun 1905. The order made on 21 Jul 1905 was discharged on 2 Mar 1906.
